THE BACKGROUND GROUP.

The crowd hurries, the music sadly plays; The meet, for, lo, it is the day of days; The home returning heroes come; a cry Of welcome should be lifted to the sky And flowers strewn the people trampled ways.

The drums beat martially, with rhythmic beat The steps resound along the gaping street. Mark! What acclamation! And how the folk do press!

To see, to touch, may be, the very dream Of those who dared the death when life is sweet!

But stay! Where joy is general, where the sound Of jubilation rends the air around, Why is your group so silent in its place, With war's impassioned image face to face?

Wherefore these eyes cast smile on the ground? Who are these hangers back, these dark robed ones?

They are the mothers who are left of sons, The wives whose dearest life all unconcerned Aids with vital vision on hero or beast, The children gaped at the mouths of guns.

—Richard Burton in Outlook.

A Sentimental Journey

And Its Results.

By GILBERT DAYLE.

It was about 4 o'clock one afternoon in February, and Hippesley was sitting on the veranda of the Cafe de Paris at Monte Carlo. He sat deep in thought, his ears mechanically listening to the strains of the little Hungarian band a few yards away from him. He was thinking of the reason that had brought him to the place. He had been abroad for 12 years, yet within a month of his return he had left again and hurried to spend a few days on the Riviera before taking steamer at Marseilles.

It was absurd, he knew it, but the longing to see her face again was irresistible. He would not seek an opportunity of speaking with her. The scheme on which their lives had been worked out made this impossible. He simply had an overwhelming desire to see her. Then he could go back to his lonely life, not happy; he could never be that, but with a fresh picture of the one woman he had ever loved.

He noticed a smart carriage draw up before the broad steps of the Casino, and almost simultaneously a man and a woman came out of the building. The man was middle aged, a trifle heavy in build and faultlessly dressed. He banded the lady into the carriage, gave a last look and clutched hold of the table. She was a young English woman, magnificently beautiful.

"The color left his face, and he riveted his eyes on her. He watched her smilingly say 'goodbye' to the man on the steps; then the carriage turned and drove rapidly away. As it vanished from sight he sank back in his chair his mouth twitching. His throat seemed dry and parched; he stretched forward and drank some tea at a gulp. Then the voices of two men talking just behind him reached his ears.

"That was the Princess Zandra. She is living at the Villa Eronde, at Banniel."

"Enormously rich?"

"He was till a day or so ago." The man lowered his voice. Hippesley found himself straining for the next words. "I happen to know," came in almost a whisper, "that the late prince was sufficiently ill advised to invest nearly all his money in an enterprise that has recently come to the ground with a crash, and the princess, who never had the slightest suspicion of her affairs not being in a satisfactory state, has suddenly been told that another year at her present rate of expenditure will leave her penniless."

"What will she do?"

"Go on living as she has done and marry again. Women with such beauty can pick and choose. There are no bad planets for them. Rumor says it will be the man who has just left her. He is not a good man, but he is passionately in love with her and a millionaire twice over."

Hippesley rose from his seat and, making his way round to the terrace, sank into a seat. He felt he could hear no more. It was all so curious, so startlingly strange. To think that the girl he had left living with her father on the outskirts of a quiet English country town should have developed into this wonderful Princess Zandra, whose beauty was known throughout Europe. And they had loved one another! He had gone abroad with the hope of making a name for himself, of being able to claim her. But his luck had dogged him, and the time had never come when he could write to her. He had left her free, and as the years went by, bringing nothing but persistent failure, he knew that it was not for him to possess the only thing he counted worth having. Occasionally scraps of intelligence as to the course her life had taken drifted to him. Her father had died, and she had gone to live with a wealthy aunt in London. From stray papers that reached him he learned that her beauty had caused quite a sensation in society. Then at last came the news that she had married a prince, a prince of great position, Prince Zandra.

He wondered if she ever thought of him—remembered the night he had confessed his love to her. Not a day had passed in those long years of failure but her image had been before him. Now, at length, when he had achieved some slight success, it was too late. All that was left for him was to take the absurd little journey of sentiment.

Early next morning he traveled to Banniel. He got out at the railway station and, following the path that led round to St. Jean, passed the fishing village and gained the Point. There he sank down on the ground and gave himself up to his reflections. It was a perfect morning, a cloudless sky, the air soft and pregnant with the perfume of the roses that grew right to the edge of the tiny cliff. Some 30 feet below him was the sea, not a ripple on its smooth surface, the clear blue tints gleaming in the sunshine.

Presently he was aware of a woman gazing curiously at him. The next moment they had recognized one another. She went suddenly pale, and her lips parted in wonder.

"Ralph!" she gasped.

He looked at her mutely. He was face to face with her at last, and the blood went throbbing through his veins.

"Yes, just Ralph," he said mechanically.

She held out her hand, and he took it awkwardly.

"And to think it is you after all these years!" she said softly.

Hippesley did not speak. His thoughts had flown back a dozen years to the night when he had left her. An indelible idea came to him that she, too, was thinking of the same thing.

"I won't lie," he said abruptly. "I am not here by chance. I heard you were on the Riviera, and after all these years I wanted to see you again—just to see you; I had no notion of speaking."

She gazed at him steadily, as if trying to read his thoughts.

"You have loved me all this time?" she asked slowly.

He bowed his head. She turned away with a little sob.

"And you never wrote?" she cried.

"Oh, why didn't you write?"

"I was a failure—such an utter failure I could not write to claim you," he said hoarsely. "You did well. I wasn't worth waiting for."

She looked at him, the tears glistening in her eyes.

"What a jumble fate made of our lives!" she sighed.

"It did not matter. You are the Princess Zandra."

"Oh, I am tired—tired to death of it all!" she cried in a tone of utter weariness. "To have to live in an artificial world, among people who are not my people—there is no one left to me now—and to have to begin it all over again!" she added in a half sorrowful, musing tone.

He understood. He remembered the words he had overheard at the cafe. It was all true, then. She looked up at him quickly, with a smile.

"But you, Hippesley, what have you done?" she asked gently.

"For years nothing. Now, at last, I've got a small estate in Ceylon. It's a fair living, while I work hard—not a bad life, too, for a man who has lost his ambitions."

"No, not a bad life," she repeated. "A lonely one, though." She gave a little laugh. There was an infinite note of sadness in it. "As lonely as mine has been."

She lifted her head, and their eyes met. He read something in her gaze—a something that sent him trembling from head to foot.

"My God, Emma!" he cried. "If it were not for the Princess Zandra!"

He saw her eyes suddenly shine, the color rush to her cheeks.

"Remember only that I am a poor woman again," she whispered. "That I've never forgotten, never could forget!" Her voice died away.

His brain was in a whirl. It seemed hardly possible.

"But the life?" he cried. "Think, after all, you've—"

"I only loved once. It was you I thought had forgotten!"

The low, soft voice came to a stop. They stood looking into one another's eyes.

"Don't send me back to the old life again, Ralph," she murmured. "Mainly about people."

PROVOKING HATRED.

After Great Britain has subjugated South Africa into a peaceful state, which with her superior strength she eventually must, unless the native race shall be entirely exterminated, it will be a long time before she will find them such a source of strength as have Canada or Australia proven in the struggle upon which the imperial government entered. It is barely possible that the home authorities are ignorant of the despotic practices that have been carried on there under military rule, and for which there is no defense. Former President Merriam of Cape Colony some time ago told of some of the practices that have been going on there that could be prompted only by the inordinate desire to show the power that those in positions of responsibility could exercise, however much of malice it might display. He averred that even in Cape Colony, which remained loyal, the people have been so shamefully maltreated that they hate the sovereign government and with abundant reason. Respectable people have been placed under arrest and committed upon the newspaper charge made by irresponsible persons that they were guilty of sedition for uttering harmless observations. Freedom of the press is unknown there and a rigid censorship has kept the real facts from the people outside. Bitter non content among women and children whose homes have been burned by the British army, had been confined in camps under armed guards and sentries; attempts to secure their liberation had been made by humane Cape Colonists who had guaranteed to supply them with food and shelter, but all in vain. It will need that an entirely new generation shall spring up before anything but the most intense hatred, even though as shrewdly concealed as may be, can be cherished for such treatment. And a glory of that sort can be of little benefit to a sovereign government.

BETTER FOR THE STATE.

The decision of Judge Hawley upon the restraining order in the Nevada county railroad case is in no wise an indication of the final disposal of the matter when it comes up for trial on its merits. In the interest of Nevada it is to be hoped that the law will sustain the company represented by Senator Clarke of Montana, in which case there will be no question as to the construction of a road through the southern portion of the State and on to its terminal point at Los Angeles. It would, moreover, be a competitive line which would prove of great advantage to the people of the counties through which the line was extended and also those contiguous thereto. The road property itself would be a welcome addition to the assessment roll of the State as well as the southern counties, apart from what it would be the means of creating by developments in the section through which it passes. Granting that the other company will extend the road, through to the Pacific tide water, from its other connections it will be in no sense a competing line as would the under the control of a separate and independent company. In any event, whichever way the suit is decided, the people will be indebted to the Clarke company for the additional trouble, the enterprise had been abandoned by the plaintiff, the Oregon Short Line company, and which probably never would have been resumed but for the movement of the Utah, San Pedro and Los Angeles company, represented by Senator Clarke.

SHOULD BE FOLLOWED UP.

The Tascarauna Movers' Union is taking time by the forelock in circulating a petition for an extension of the Chinese Exclusion law, which expires next year. There was great opposition to the law at the time of its passage, twenty years ago and it only passed by the barest majority and many concessions had to be made to secure its passage at all, and to secure the Executive approval which was accorded with the greatest reluctance. At that time the entire Pacific Coast was aflame with anti-Chinese sentiment and it was chiefly through the efforts of the delegations from the extreme west that the bill became a law. It looks at the present time, from the political complexion and general attitude of the Congressional majority upon other matters germane to the Chinese question that an extension of the law will be difficult to obtain, and certainly not unless public sentiment asserts itself as emphatically as it did when the original bill was under consideration. The Tascarauna movers' movement is a step in the right direction and it is to be hoped that their example will be followed by all of the labor organizations in the Union, and all other combinations for the protection of American industries and labor.

UNINTENTIONAL OFFENSE.

The Virginia Report is seen that there was no intent upon the part of the Journal to impugn the question the veracity of that paper in its comments upon the disparagement of the papers in the Crowley case or Judge Jones' connection therewith, nor can we imagine how our Correspondent could construe our words into a semblance of anything offensive or "coming closely to the borders of insult." We did not believe that the ex-Attorney General made way with the papers with malicious or criminal intent, for we could not imagine that a State oficer with ordinary common sense would commit so foolish, let alone so flimsily an act. Certainly the Attorney General is responsible for the safety of the papers in his office, and if it was through carelessness upon his part that the Crowley papers were removed or are missing, he is entitled to the censure that such duty dereliction would warrant. If, as we cannot credit, they were purposely made away with by him, he should be sent to the States prison, or perhaps more properly to the idiot ward of the Nevada Hospital for Mental Diseases. It is true that the editor of the Journal is under no obligations of any kind whatever to Judge W. D. Jones, and hopes he never will be. His relations with him, personal or political, are not such as would warrant condemnation or voluntary defense of a dishonest official act. However, we try to be just, and it was in pursuance of that written which appear to have given our young friend of the upper level such mortal offense. Of the circumstantial evidence of "previous reason" for distrust of the ex-Attorney General's honesty to which the Report alludes, the Journal knows nothing, as neither were given in substantiation of the charge. We understand that an investigation is to be had, when it is to be hoped the entire facts will be made known, and whoever the offender may be he will find no sympathizer or defender in the scribe of the Journal.

DUTY OFF.

From today, July 25th, the fifteen per cent duty on imports into Porto Rico is abolished. That island having gotten into a shape to pay the expenses of the government, large as they are, with the big force of ornamental officials quartered upon the people, under the Foraker Act, from revenues otherwise secured. The President consented to put an end to the tax above mentioned. At the same time the information is given that the government is about to return to the importers, duty to the amount of some $2,000,000 a year, paid upon Porto Rico imports before the passage of the Foraker Act, and therefore unconstitutional, exacted, according to the recent decision of the Supreme Court. It is well enough for the American people to remember, however, that they will enjoy no part of the advantage from any of the abolition of the duty on the one hand, or return of unlawfully collected duty on the other hand. The advantage all goes to the trusts in both cases.

A number of our Democratic and Silver party exchanges are already booming favorite candidates for State office next year. This early display of favoritism is likely to prove boomerangs instead of boosts for the candidates so "favored." Besides, it is provocative of hostility and of proving the harmony and good feeling which should prevail in the conventions. There is plenty of good material for all of the offices in the Democratic and Silver parties or in either of them, and the Journal is content to await the action of their representatives in convention assemblies confident that their judgment will result in the present, a line of merit which will prove acceptable to the entire anti-Republican element in the State.

WHITE MAN TURNED YELLOW.

Great consternation was felt by the friends of M. A. Hogarty of Lexington, Ky., when they saw he was turning yellow. His skin slowly changed color, and his eyes, and he suffered terribly. His malady was Yellow Jaundice. He was treated by the best doctors, but without benefit. Then he was advised to try Electric Bitters, the wonderful Stomach and Liver remedy and he was cured. After taking two bottles he was wholly cured. A trial proves its matchless merit for all Stomach, Liver and Kidney troubles. Only 50 cents. Sold by S. J. Hodgkinson.

Patte Crest wheels are light running, durable and inexpensive. They are sold by Steve Williams.

DECISION RENDERED IN FAVOR OF WEDEKIND

The Bell Mine Closed Down by an Injunction.

INTERESTING PRECEDENT ESTABLISHED

The Decision Affects Many Mines Throughout the West.

THE case of Wedekind vs. Bell et al. was yesterday decided by Judge Talbot in the Second Judicial District Court in favor of the plaintiff.

This is one of the most important decisions ever rendered in the United States. The moot question of the right of location of apexes of mineral veins to follow their ore out of their side lines and pursue the lateral dip under agricultural patents has been answered, and answered in favor of the locators.

Unnumbered cases are dependent upon this decision. In Washoe county alone there are instances where work on claims has been abandoned because of the knowledge that the lead dips under land patented for other mining purposes.

If the judgment of the lower court is sustained by the supreme bench, an appeal will be doubtless taken, a precedent will be established that will mean the working of thousands of at least hundreds of idle mines throughout the west.

This case was bitterly fought. Wedekind

Judge Talbot pronounced the decision to them was evidenced by the staking in favor of the plaintiff.

There were few spectators present, no intimation being had that a decision would be given without some delay for consideration.

When the news of the outcome of the case reached the streets there was considerable discussion and comment.

The Bell works will be shut down immediately and remain closed until such time, if ever, that the Supreme Court sees fit to dissolve the injunction.

This will throw twenty-four miners out of work. The Bell mine was lately equipped with a thirty horsepower steam hoist and was producing a thousand dollars or more a day from an apparently huge deposit of high grade ore.

The Reno Star has recently passed out of the hands of George Wedekind. It is said to have been purchased by John Sparks for the sum of $205,000, conditional upon winning the suit against Mr. Bell and his associates.

The confidence of the Sparks people that the decision would be favorable

JUDGE TALBOT'S DECISION.

THE Court held that the plaintiff, Wedekind, had a valid mining location, which covered the apex of the vein discovered by him, that the vein dipped under Bell's ground and that Bell wrongfully entered upon it and that whoever discovers and locates a mining claim has a right to follow it on its dip over his side lines.

It was further held that this right is secured to the miner by the mining laws of Congress, wherever the ledge may go on its dip and that it makes no difference whether the surface land adjoining is patented for agriculture or any other purpose.

Judge Talbot held that Congress intended to give the miner the full fruit and benefit of his discovery.

He further held that in granting Wedekind this vein and giving Bell the surface ground included in the patent, that Bell was maintained in all that he purchased from the government; that the Conroy patent was issued for agricultural purposes and was not injured for such purpose by permitting Wedekind to remove the ore from beneath the surface, as he could do so without disturbing the surface.

The court reviewed the authorities and distinguished the present case from those which were relied upon by Bell and ordered that judgment be entered in favor of Wedekind for the recovery of this vein and that the Bell people be perpetually enjoined from working in that vein beneath the surface of Bell's ground.

Wedekind discovered the famous Reno Star lead sixteen months ago and in a short time extracted $70,000 from the vein. It dipped under land owned by Mrs. Conroy, who had disposed of a portion of her patent to Chas. B. Bell and associates, who began searching for the lead. They found it several months ago near the boundaries of the lands and have extracted about $52,000 worth of ore therefrom.

Suit was brought by George Wedekind to recover the lead and Judge Currier decided in favor of the defendant. The second suit was brought before a different judge on somewhat different grounds.

Excellent legal counsel was employed by both parties to the suit. Attorney Joseph and Ford, who own a third interest in the Bell mine, were assisted in the defense by Judge Currier, Sr., while attorneys Cheney, Dorsey and Wren conducted the defense.

After the introduction of evidence closed an adjournment was had until last Saturday, when argument began. At noon yesterday each side closed and on reconvening in the afternoon.

ASSOCIATION OF PHYSICIANS

A number of the physicians of this city have formed the Washoe County Medical Association. Dr. Thomas has been chosen president and Dr. Plummer secretary.

The following committees were appointed: On Fees and Code—Dr. S. C. Gibson, J. A. Lewis and George Fee. On Constitution and By-Laws—Drs. Hogan, Hershiser, Wood, Walker and Gibson.

The next meeting of the association will be held Monday evening in the office of Dr. Thomas.

A NEW CLUB HOUSE.

The Reno Wheelmen have under consideration the building of a club house. Land for this purpose was donated by Congressman Newlands and plans drawn for the building. Last evening at the regular meeting of the Wheelmen, J. E. Pamplin appeared before the club and presented a proposition from the Western Loan and Savings Company to erect a club house on the installment plan, to be paid for in seven or eight years. The proposition was taken under consideration.

NEW MINING CORPORATION

Articles of incorporation of the Nevada Mineral Company of Nevada have been filed.

Their purpose is principally to engage in mining and to promote, develop and deal in mining property and real estate.

The capital stock is $200,000, consisting of 200,000 shares at a par value of $1 each.

E. L. King of Verdi, M. S. Goodman of Floriston, Albert D. Ayres, R. F. Condit and W. J. Lynch of Reno are named as trustees.

The company has very promising claims in the Wedekind district and will push their development as rapidly as possible.

MAY BUILD A SMELTER.

The California and Nevada Copper Mining and Smelting Company is operating quite a force of men on Peavine. It proposes to erect a smelter for the reduction of the large bodies of ore already brought into sight. The company has eleven claims under bond, ten of them belonging to the Nevada Exploration and Development Company and the eleventh to F. C. Ugle.

ACTIVITY RESUMES

The Midsummer Dull Season Is Drawing to an End.

Reno hibernates in the summer time—in direct opposition to all the laws governing meteorology, zoology and other "ologies" galore.

When the heated term begins there is a rush to the harvest fields, mines, ranges and lumber camps. The population of the town then consists chiefly of women, children, Indians and hoboes.

The result is that business houses enjoy an opportunity to take stock and pessimists to discuss hard times.

After a period of inactivity the tide of population sets back toward Reno. The men come in with full purses.

Those having families lay in supplies like the provident ant, while the untutored imitate the improvident butterfly.

For many weeks past Reno has been extraordinarily quiet. The streets were empty during the day and lacked the accustomed evening crowds.

Within the past few days, beginning with Saturday night, a change has been apparent.

Clerks are now on the jump and people jostle elbows on the sidewalks.

Sporting men are dropping in and opening games. Money is freer and indications are for the liveliest autumn and winter that Reno has ever experienced.

One of the greatest trade stimulants is the new born mining industry in this locality. At the least calculation a thousand dollars a day is being thrown into the channels of trade by the recently discovered mines.

THE STREET RAILWAY

Is Billed to Arrive in This City When the Robins Nest Again.

If Renoites want to ride in electric cars this fall they will have to go outside the State, but early in the spring-time the trolleys will be tripping down the streets and rapid transit between this city and Wedekind will be an assured fact.

Arrangements have been made with the city for rights of way through the streets and thirty-five bricklayers are throwing up the walls of a $60,000 power house.

It will be no one-horse hobnob plant that will be put in. Oh, no!

Considerable secrecy is still maintained by the promoters of the enterprise, but the Journal has learned that the company back of the street car scheme is composed of San Francisco millionaires, who have considered the proposition carefully and are convinced that an up-to-date street railway system in this growing city would be a paying investment.

A year or two from now the slurrans and mossbacks will rub their eyes and wonder how the dickens Reno forged to the front and became a metropolis without their permission.

PRINTING CONTRACT SUIT.

The suit of Webster and Son vs. the County of Washoe was on trial yesterday in the District Court. This action was brought to recover payment for advertising and job printing done for the county under contract with the Board of Commissioners.

The plaintiff introduced all its evidence yesterday. The defense has three witnesses yet to call.

ANOTHER BRICK.

Excavations are being made for another big brick building on Virginia street near Second. Who is doing it the reporter has not learned. The erection of new buildings is becoming too frequent an occurrence in Reno for complete tabs to be kept.

OFFERED AND REFUSED.

Messrs. Nelson and Williams evidently have confidence in their new strike. They yesterday refused a cash offer of $10,000 for their claims. The incline is now showing up about three feet of ore. Assays are in the neighborhood of $100 a ton.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PISNIG

Trinity Sunday School go for their annual picnic to Steamboat next Saturday morning at 8:55. The fare for adults, children over 12 is 50 cents, for children under 12, 25 cents the round trip. Rev. Mr. Unsworth has the tickets for sale.

MINE CLOSED DOWN.

Sheriff McLinn served an injunction yesterday afternoon on the owners of the Bell mine and closed down the works. A score or more of miners came in from the camp last night. Needless to say the statu quo of the case was liberally discussed.

ANOTHER SHAFT.

Wm. Whitworth has completed his contract to sink 74 feet for the Crocker Company. He thinks the prospect is one of the best in the Wedekind district. He says the prospects are very good for catching an ore body.

THREE MINING MEN FROM RICH TONOPAH

Give a Vivid Description of the Bonanza Camp and the Mode of Living There.

A small but representative contingent from Tonopah struck Reno last evening.

Frank Higgs, one of the discoverers of the camp, E. Dunlap, a leaser, and L. F. Collins, an expert representing the company that purchased the group, comprised the delegation.

A Journal interviewer "buzzed" them on the conditions and outlook there with the appended result:

Nothing that has been written about the camp has been exaggerated. It is a great and will be a greater producer.

The veins, of which there are a half a dozen, are all permanent and carry big values.

The formation of the entire country is rhyolite or porphyry and the leads are true quartz. They are from two to six feet wide on the surface and increase in size with depth. At first it was thought that the mineralized zone lay entirely within the original eight locations, but recently Roy Sunderland of Reno and his partners sunk a shaft 115 feet deep quite a distance from the group and picked up a lead two and a half feet wide that carries a couple of hundred dollars a ton. This proves that the pay chutes are not limited in length and other outside strikes will probably soon be made.

The ore is sorted and only the richest is shipped for reduction. Ore is piled up rapidly on account of lack of means of transportation.

There are about 600 men in the camp, of whom 400 are working in the mines. It would be folly for any one without means to go there looking for employment.

While the labor market is overdone, there are splendid chances for investment and business enterprise for people with energy and money.

There are about 40 women in camp and as many children. There are few Indians and no Chinese.

"About the best people on earth are gathered in the camp," said Mr. Higgs. "There is no shooting and no fighting. You never hear a cross word."

"The camp is self governing. Johnny Freshies and bad men got the run very quickly from the Citizen's Committee."

"We are also free of psalm singers. No religious services are held in the camp. We may not be Christians in name but we try to behave ourselves as Christians should."

The Tonopahites use nearly as much whisky as they do water, although the latter is only $1.50 a barrel. Six or seven teams haul water from the springs a few miles away.

There is a scarcity of lumber in the camp, but what buildings are being erected are of a permanent nature.

The town is well laid off and is compactly built. There is a great danger of a conflagration sweeping the camps off the earth on account of scarcity of water and high winds.

The leasers have until the first of January to work three claims and are extracting ore very rapidly.

Several whims are on the way to the camp.

FEEL VERY KINDLY

A Nice Letter From the Captain of the Garden City Team.

The Reno Wheelmen have received the following letter from the Garden City Wheelmen of San Jose showing that the visitors from Sunny California appreciate the way in which they were treated while here:

"San Jose, July 17, 1901.
"To the President and members of the Reno Wheelmen—Gentlemen:

"On behalf of the Garden City Wheelmen of San Jose I wish to thank you one and all for your courteous treatment of us while in your city. I must say that you treated us as we have never been treated before in the many places we have ridden and we do not know how to thank you. It was more than we expected, and you can rest assured that if ever you come to San Jose we will do our best to entertain you as you did us.

"I must say you have the most gentlemanly lot of riders we have ever met. We lost, but like all defeated riders we would like very much to ride you again in September, during the fair, if it is possible for you to make arrangements for another race, to see if we cannot do better. We will then have our regular relay team.

"If at any time any of your members intend visiting San Jose be sure and let us know and we will certainly give him a good time. Wishing the Reno Wheelmen the success in the future that they have had in the past, and thanking you again for your kindness to us, we beg to remain, yours very truly
"J. W. DERMODY.

NEVADA'S EXHIBIT

Saw at the Pan-American Exposition.

The editor of the Dispatch returned Sunday from a visit to the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo. The Nevada exhibit at the Exposition is one of which the State may well feel proud. It is encased in mahogany and plate glass and is about fifty feet in length.

Its greatest attraction is a miniature stamp mill running full blast by electricity. Next in point of interest is a representation of a sixteen-mule team hauling three heavy freight wagons loaded with box and is true to life to the minutest detail.

Timbering in our mines is shown by models made of wood. The plaster cast of a miner, Dick Kelley, of Bannock, is a great feature of the interesting display. Specimens of every mineral known to exist in Nevada are to be found on the shelves and arranged to present a fine view to the spectator. Samples and specimens from mines all over the State are at hand. Every variety of copper ore, gold in all forms, and the richest specimens of silver the world ever produced, fairly charm the initiated and by their beauty alone hold all visitors.

Above the cases and extending the entire length along the wall are large views of some of our principal mills and mines. The arrangement is striking and effective in arresting everybody who visits the building. The exhibit is in charge of Mr. J. A. Yerlinton, who is assisted by Leslie Bell, a son of Senator Bell, of Nye.
